REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. This is an Examiner's statement of reasons for allowance. The closest prior art Simpson et al U.S. Pat. No. 6,549,894 discloses a computerized docketing system for legal matters, comprising a database operatively arranged to store information related to the legal matters, including actions to be taken with respect to the legal matters.

IBM Technical Disclosure Bulletin discloses a method for automatically applying security features to Ethernet and Token Ring Local Area Network.

Lundberg Steven WO002080039A1 discloses a system for managing patent and trademark application data via the internet, comprising matter, task, and security modules.

However, neither Simpson nor IBM Technical Disclosure Bulletin and Lundberg fails to anticipate or render obvious the recited feature:

As per claims 1, 6 and 26 " an authorization structure coupled to the processor and configured to selectively allow the users to log into the control structure and access the records to selectively add, modify and read project records depending on the users' access levels, the authorization structure including administration access control that allows selectively granting access levels to users, and a communication structure coupled to the processor including a notification structure configured to periodically distribute information to users based on predefined criteria including dates or activities".
